Holiday Greetings to all!

How lucky we all are to be in this time of year, when all of us seem to pay particular attention to the fine attributes and character of our fellow neighbors. My thoughts in turn often drift to Kawanhee as it is so easy to notice all this good in others, and I must say that I count my blessings that I am able to share fellowship with the wonderful people in our camp family.

The founding mission that the Frank brothers set in place in 1921, and the core of our teaching philosophy since, that Kawanhee be a character building force in the lives of boys, is continually being met as we all have striven so importantly to nurture the boys, as well as, fine tune our own character.

We are all so fortunate to learn from, and to instill in our own person; so many of these fine qualities such as personal honor, high moral standards, and strong ethics that are so prevalent in everyone associated with camp. The all important lesson being that our own actions and behavior become the lasting gift in our interactions with others, and this incredible talent continues to affect everyone we come in contact with throughout the entire year, and not just during the holiday season.

My greatest gift is the enrichment I receive in counting you all as friends! Enjoy your holidays, and don't forget to start thinking about your goals for Kawanhee 2001.

"TAPPING" in History

Kawanhee is well-known around Lake Webb for the 9:00 P.M. TAPS being played and folks listen for them. Did you know when and why they were composed? Eric Jensen, former camper and counselor, and Navy pilot, sent the story of General Butterfield who was a Civil War hero and was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor for his services.

One restless night in July of 1862, General Butterfield camped with his men at Berkley Plantation, overlooking the James River near Tidewater, Virginia. He sat on his cot and thought about the good fortune he had had the previous month during the battle of Gaines' Mill—his wounds had not been serious. Others, of course, hadn't shared his good fortune. Many dead and wounded had been left behind there. Those that had escaped might have fallen a few days later at Malvern Hill, when Lee's troops attacked but fell back before the Union Soldiers. Butterfield's thoughts were interrupted by his bugler sounding Extinguishing Lights. The General thought that tune was too stiff and formal. He reached in his pocket and drew forth a crumpled, stained envelope. Whistling and humming, he got down to work finishing his song. O.W. Norton, Butterfield's 22-year old bugler, came in and the General asked him to play his song on the bugle. Norton played it several times and they made changes until they were satisfied. With that, the General asked Norton to substitute the new call for the regular call. The music was beautiful and heard far beyond their brigade. Other buglers asked for copies of the music. Soon it was taken up by all Confederate buglers. Later Taps was substituted for the customary rifle volleys at the graveside.

Kawanhee sings the following verse at the end of all campfires:

"Day is done, gone the sun,
From the lakes, from the hills, from the sky,
All is well, safely rest, God is nigh."

Another favorite is:

"Fading light, dims the sights,
And a star gems the sky, gleaming bright,
From afar, drawing nigh, falls the night."

Kawanhee is grateful to Chuck Compher and Brian Birch for selecting campers to carry on the tradition of having Taps played each evening and always at the conclusion of the campfire.

We all thank Butterfield for this wonderful melody that brings a contented finality to the day. It is a very heartwarming sound and copied the world over.

A Message from Michael "Meriwether" Altmaier

Holiday greetings from Wyoming! My trip is delayed at the moment because of 18 inches of snow and sub-freezing temperatures! I guess I might be like the real Lewis and Clark delayed by winter. I have decided, however, not to build a fort as they did! I have traveled 7,500 miles in my 1994 Saturn. This trip has been a valuable experience for me. I have had many great adventures. I have visited many major battlefields, climbed mountains, and traveled through unknown cities. I even had a confrontation with a rattlesnake. I will keep you updated on my trip.
