Grey Victory Drive A Success

The Greys, downed by the Maroons by eighty-one points last week, launched an extensive victory drive this past week and not only made up the deficit but added an additional seventy-nine points to put them on top for the first time this season.

The announcement of the score Maroons 4758 and the Greys 4837 came something as a surprise, a surprise not uncultivated by the studied disarray of Del Tracy's score report at Saturday's campfire. After a moment of unparalleled silence, it was apparent that both captains were speedier at math than their teammates, as the first burst of excitement came from the Grey captain, Roy Miller.

The Maroon captain, Rich Davis, a little dejected, rose and led his team in a cheer of congratulations for the Greys to show their good sportsmanship. However, within this cheer you could read the determination of a drive that would put them on top again when the score is read at the next campfire.

The Greys returned the courtesy with a cheer of their own that rocked the stately pines on council point. Now that Roy and his boys have the bit in their teeth, it will take a major effort on the part of the Maroons to wrest it away from them, as they will obviously brace themselves to check their rival's forward surge during the coming week.

Greys Do It Again

The Greys won their third straight watermeet of the season, 30 to 20, Saturday, July 30, and for the third time, the meet was a very close one.

The Greys did not have things their own way throughout the meet, as the Maroons scored two firsts to the Greys' three. The score was tied until the last event, which cinched the meet for the Greys.

The Greys had a definite advantage over the Maroons, however, as the Grey team had an added incentive. They were afraid if they lost the meet, their leader, Roy Miller, would make them all wear a bathing suit like his.

In contradiction to my last statement of their leader being heard, Roy, added a new cliché "seen and heard". If they couldn't hear their leader, the Greys could surely see him offering encouragement, as he was bedecked in bright, black and white flowered, knee-hugger bathing trunks.

This was the shortest water meet in Kawanhee's history and didn't give either team much time to show any great accomplishments. It was a meet of "fun and play", not swimming skills.

The first event, the Junior C rowboat swamp, gave the Maroons the first score of the meet. The object was to swamp an aluminum rowboat by splashing with the hands. Tipping was not permitted. One boy on each team had the top half of a cut-off detergent bottle to help with the swamping, but if he was not speedy, the water would run right through as the cap was off the top. Ken Chapman's (G) splashing was not too effective, as he was splashing the water "up" and not "in". I suppose he figured why put all that water in the boat, we'll just have to bail it out.

The Junior C pajama race is a traditional event at Kawanhee and is always good for a few laughs. The object is to don pajamas, dive in and swim to the small dock, where your teammate is waiting to try his skill of putting on wet pj's. He, then, must swim back to the other dock and exchange the pj's again. This procedure goes on for four trips between the docks and the transfer of the wet pajamas three times. It is quite a task at its best, but when the boy furnishing the pajamas is a might larger than the other boys, they have a problem, as Stony Hinds, (M), and Phil Drake, (G), found out on their first lap.

They were more fortunate than the others, however, as they started with the dry pj's, but they still ran into a little difficulty. Phil swam so fast that he was swimming right out of his pj's, but with his quick-thinking, he used one hand to hold the pants and the other to swim. However, Stony, didn't think of this quickly enough, and he swam right out of his, and Phil left him in his backwash as he reached his teammate, Blake Paterson, and exchanged pj's. Blake had difficulty untangling the wet mess, and Stony, recovering his loss, reached his teammate Raub Smith, before Blake left the dock. However, Raub had the same difficulty untangling the wet garment, and gave Blake a little extra time to reach his waiting teammate. After a couple of laps and a little more experience and practice in the art of donning wet pj's, things went a little more smoothly, but speedster, Brad Coley, (M), determined to make up the half lap advantage the Greys had, swam so fast that he forgot to hold onto the pj's and swam out of the bottomis. He quickly recovered his loss, but not in time to reach the small dock before his Grey rival, Gordon Glidden. Stan McCleave, (M), and John MacDonald, (G), finished the relay, with MacDonald, reaching home first to tally for the Greys.

The rest of the meet consisted of three water polo matches with the Junior B's, the Junior A's and the Seniors furnishing the players. Only six players could participate at a time for each side. Hank Hiser, (G), made the first goal in the Junior B game in 45 seconds. Mike Standen, (M), made the first goal in the Junior A game in just 30 seconds, and Frank Watson, (G), made the first goal in the Senior game, (time unknown). Roy Miller, (G), Steve Grubbs, (G), and John Bacon, (G), scored second, third and fourth respectively, cinching the game and the meet for the Greys, 30 to 20.

Bemis Boys

One of the most vigorous activities in which a Kawanhee camper may participate is the Junior Maine Guide Program sponsored by the State of Maine. This set-up, through annual examinations open to all qualified campers from all of the state's many camps, offers a standardized recognition for skill and accomplishment in campcraft on a statewide level.

The whole four-day period is a basic field test in camping, for each group must establish its own wilderness camp and be under constant observation and interrogation on such fundamentals as choice of campsite, the construction and maintenance of the shelters, cooking, canoeing, knowing state fire regulations and effective methods of dealing with forest fires; being able to recognize common Maine trees; being able to work with topographical maps and to map a specific area to close scale with only the use of sighting compass; using an axe safely and accurately; knowing the fundamentals of first aid and how to apply them; being acquainted with the state fishing and game laws; and finally having a general geographical knowledge of the State of Maine, including its parks, mountains, lakes, rivers and major cities.

One of our hardest tests was called the "wet-day" fire. Have you ever tried to take a log that has been soaking in the lake, chop it up for kindling and wood to build a fire; light the fire and have it burning well enough to boil a cup of water — all this in ten minutes or you fail the test. Bob Lancione, one of the Bemis Boys this trip, built his "wet-day" fire in six minutes to pass this particular phase of his program. I, Scott Tracy, was not so fortunate. I had my fire built well within the time limit, but I thought that I would give it a little extra help by blowing on it to help it along. However, I blew a little too hard, and the whole thing fell in, and it counted as a "fail" on this part of my program.

Our campsite for the J. M. G. program was held in Bemis, Maine, which is about sixty miles from Kawanhee and about sixteen miles off the main road back in the wilderness. We chose a good campsite and an efficient cooking area. However, the elements were not with us; it rained for three of the four days. Our fire was built between two rocks and made for a perfect stove. Since we had brought just one tarpaulin, we had to improvise a covering for our fire to keep the rain out. Dave Emery donated his poncho for this purpose. Rather than to carry water from the brook, we hit upon the idea of punching a hole in the hood of the poncho to let the rain water fall into a pail that we had sitting on the fire. This provided us with hot water when it was time to wash the dishes. Del Tracy arrived later in the day, to provide another poncho to the cause.

Each of us had to bake, boil and fry to pass our cooking part of the program. A Guide came by and joined us for every meal. Most of the Guides were very nice; one in particular our group liked — she was about 34 — 24 — 34, says Herb, our leader.

We ate quite well, but it didn't taste as good as our Mother's cooking, that's for sure. Lancione made stew and a pie; Heintz made hamburgers (giant size) and chocolate pudding; Dave Emery made pancakes and I treated the boys to French toast, with cinnamon, and hot biscuits and hot chocolate — not all at the same time, of course.

This year's group of boys turned out a good show as always in spite of the rain. The rain didn't bother anyone but Bob Heintz who had a 2" hole in the top of his tent. However, he came up with the idea of putting a pan over the hole, thus making his tent as dry as ever.

Did we pass? That is the question that we are all asking, but the results will not be known for a few days yet. We all had a good time and feel as if we have learned a lot. Very seldom does a camper pass the J.M.G. the first season or even the second, but his chances improve with each attempt however.

The boys making the trip this season were Dave Emery, Bob Lancione, Bob Heintz, Tom Ruhle and Scott Tracy. Herbert T. Lorentzen was our leader.

Chain Of Ponds Trip

On Monday, July 25, a group of eighteen, fourteen campers and four counselors, went north to conquer the rapid waters of the Chain of Ponds. The group left about 9:00 o'clock and arrived about 1:00 o'clock. The boys were as follows: Jim Estabrook, Hank Hiser, Dana Lisle, Rocky Smith, Richard Fisher, Chris Schaefer, Ted Gill, Robert Marx, Dave Sweeney, Bill Eacho, Duncan Hill, John Tobin, Kurt Feick, and Jack Doege.

After arriving at 1:00 o'clock, the boys immediately set up camp and prepared their tents. Later Bates prepared one of his filling meals, which satisfied the appetites of all. Later that evening, we retired after going through a long day. During the night everyone was awakened by a thunder storm which lasted all the night. The next morning because of the steady downpour, we had a hurried breakfast. One camper, Jim Estabrook, was quoted as having said, "Hey, I want some more pancakes, you just gave me two."

Later in the morning, after the rain stopped and the weather cleared, the campers left to attempt to paddle their way down the Chain. They were supervised by Mitch Greenawalt, Chris Greening, and John Bacon. While paddling, we viewed many a picturesque scene.

Upon returning from this long voyage, the wind presented quite a problem. Chris Greening, known by the campers as "Curly", was the first to reach the campsite and later followed by Mitch. Somewhere in one of the streams, John Bacon and Hank Hiser got lost. Later it was decided by Hiser that they would make better time if he got out and walked. So later, Hiser and Bacon, met at some uncharted port at the island and portaged back to the campsite where they took a well deserved rest.

Later, that day, the campers had another one of Bate's tasty meals and retired for the evening.

The next morning was spent in cleaning up the area for departure. After a short ride to Canada and a stop at a nearby custard stand, we returned home. The campers all had a most enjoyable time and were rewarded with many new experiences.

Second Chain Of Ponds Trip Rained Out

The second Chain of Ponds trip will have to wait for the exciting experience had by the first group of campers to attempt the Chain. The group arrived at their destination to find that the rain would prevent their trip up the Chain, and so they returned to the camp.

The boys making the second trip were David Allan, Jimbo Barnes, Paul Bennett, Mike Blaine, Richard Caraboolad, Mike Crane, George del Valle, Ian Hanigan, George Oliva, Pete Lamb, Bill Williams, Scott Paterson, Bill Proctor, Bill Williams, and Mike Wolfe. The counselors supervising the second trip were Bates, John Fulda, Bruce Leiper, Chuck Hoffine, and Bob Zechiel.

Lights Dim Riots Penant Hopes

The local 57 Red Riots and the Blue Lights, two of the three first-place teams, squared off Wednesday, July 27, in a crucial tussle for the top. Light lefty, Craig Wolcott, boosted his '66 ledger to 3-1, by one-hitting the Riots 3-0.

In his whitewash effort, Wolcott, whiffed nine and walked second via strike outs. In the third, however, the Blues advanced their lead by two. Keith Wolcott walked again and was knocked in by Tom Scott's safety to right. The Reds launched a threat in their half getting Standen and Gordon Glidden on base, but Wolcott retired the side. The Lights tried to score again in the fourth but were thwarted by the Riot battery. Lead-off batter Mark Sengelmann reached first but was picked off by Local catcher, Leif Erickson. Phil Drake then walked and raced to third. Standen struck out the next two batters. Light pitcher, Wolcott, liked Standen's demonstration but went one better in striking out the side and ending the game.

Both pitchers put down the opposition in order in the second via strike outs. In the third, however, the Blues advanced their lead by two. Keith Wolcott walked again and was knocked in by Tom Scott's safety to right. The Reds launched a threat in their half getting Standen and Gordon Glidden on base, but Wolcott retired the side. Zulus Create Three-way Tie

Bob Zechiel's Zulus, anxious to escape the KBRL cellar, took on the league leading Tracers of Scott Tracy. In a high scoring fracas the Zulus beat the Tracers, 8-6. Charlie Kellenberger and Mike Meserole had big nights for Zeke at the plate, while Zeke himself scattered seven hits and six runs to grab the win. Opposing captain, Tracy, took the loss for his Tracers.

Roy Miller put the Tracers in the lead in the top half of the first with a home run scoring Jim Proctor ahead of him. Miller, after extensive batting practices, is coming out of a prolonged slump. In the bottom of the first with Kellenberger on first, Meserole hit his first circuit clout of the outing over left fielder, Lew Basilicata, whose leaping attempt grazed the ball.

Zulu, Tom Ruhle, singled in the bottom of the second and scored on Bob Kientz's single to left to spark the Zechiels to a two-run second frame. Meserole hit his other circuit in the bottom of the third with two on to make the score 7-2.

The Tracers came back with one in the fourth with Bob Altmaier scoring. After the Zulus scored again in the fifth, the Tracers rallied in the top of the sixth and final inning. Basilicata singled, Altmaier singled, Tracy sacrificed Basilicata home and Jim Duffey shocked one to left for a home run. The rally fell short and died, however.

Old Hand Arrives Late

It would hardly be fitting to call Ben Bennett a new arrival at Kawanhee since his first arrival at Kawanhee dates back 16 years. Ben arrived a month late, due to the fact that he and his wife, Ruth, traveled to California to see their eldest daughter, Lynne, married this past June 26. Ben teaches math at Crestview Jr. High School in Columbus, Ohio, and again he joins Herb Birch at the head of the camp's ever active department known as "Shop". He joins the ranks of the Skunk Ridge Fraternity and participates in the activities of the Polar Bear Club. His free time will be spent making the necessary repairs about camp or sunbathing on the Skunk Ridge dock.

Weld Celebrates Their Sesquicentennial

Kawanhee campers had the privilege of participating in Weld's sesquicentennial celebration July 29, 30 and 31. The Village of Weld has a population of about 450, but for this most auspicious event, people from all around arrived to help make this event a memorable one.

Bates and the camp's truck, the "bouncing buggy", loaded with Kawanhee campers participated in the two and one-half mile-long parade. Weld felt as if Kawanhee was a big part of the celebration, since the camp has been located here for forty-six years. The parade matched any that we have seen in the larger cities. It included several old-time cars, horse-drawn vehicles, humorous entrants dressed in old-time costumes, fire trucks of earlier years, etc. Three days of special activities were carried on with great success. A lobster dinner, a bean-hole bean dinner and a chicken barbecue were held on the respective days, with over four hundred people attending each, and several people were turned away when the food supply was exhausted.

Sunday, the town church held a special worship service commemorating the occasion and the Kawanhee Jr. and Sr. Choirs furnished the special music. The Senior Choir sang "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind", and the Junior Choir sang "Lead Me Lord", with Jimbo Barnes as the soloist. Bruce McInnes directed the choirs and Susan Tracy, hostess at Kawanhee Inn, was the guest organist, and George and Raymond Frank were the greeters for this special service.

The boys singing in the Junior Choir were David Allan, Doug Allan, Bruce Bennett, Paul Bennett, Chip Button, Frank Erickson, Kurt Feick, Ian Hanigan, Hank Hiser, Pete Lamb, Dana Lisle, Stanley McCleave, Clinton Newbold, Blake Paterson, Mark Sengelmann and Frank Weeks.

Saturday Activities

The weather during the latter part of the week came in for frequent comment, if only for its contrast with temperatures in other parts of the country. Kawanhee was favored with brisk, bright, windy days the first part of the week, which turned to rain Thursday and Friday. However, the rain ceased, permitting our Saturday programs to function as scheduled.

A short aquatic program was held Saturday afternoon with a free swim following. The usual Junior-Senior Counselor softball game was held after supper, with the Seniors making a come-back to win 17 to 6. The Junior Counselors just couldn't get things going for them, while every thing the seniors did, turned into another run. Dave Hoch, rookie player of the year, made two spectacular catches in left field to save the day for pitcher Del Tracy. Dave also scored two runs. Almost every player on the Senior squad scored at least one hit and one run. If Nelson Lancione, had been out in his boat instead of in left field, they would have scored even more runs. Nelson missed just one during the game. Roy Miller, playing center field, was a handicap to the Seniors also; he missed none during the game.

John Estabrook, the Junior catcher, introduced a few new steps for catchers. A couple of times there it looked as if he was doing the "Frug."

For the fourth straight Saturday, the campfire was held on Council Point, surrounded by the beautiful, stately pines with a backdrop of mountains and water. Frank Stewart, the campcraft director, lighted the central fire and got the ceremony under way. RC Frank, deciding that the Ohio State fight song, deserved better singing than that of last week, led the group this week. A noticeable change was evident. Del Tracy, in response to RC's properly handling of his alma mater's song, led the campers in singing the Cornell song, this time with all due respect to such a beautiful song. John Willis assisted Del with the song, which happens to be John's alma mater.

Bruce McInnes, led the campers in singing the "Association Song" again, which is getting to be old stuff now. Dave Hoch led the group in singing "If I Had A Hammer", which was received with much more enthusiasm. Next week Dave will have the words printed, so all the campers can join in. This song received a "Hoch Class B applause".

The evening provided the campfire with a dead calm, producing the unusual condition of one-hundred-percent audibility for all activity reports. The campers stood before the council fire with pride as their week's achievements were read.

Ed Chace told a story about the early history of Weld, Maine, our village, which is celebrating its sesquicentennial this weekend. This concluded the evening.

Sunday morning was fair and warm and another beautiful day in the mountains of Maine. Church services were held on council point with Rev. Stanley McCleave conducting the service. His topic was "What Am I Worth?" "It seems to me that one of God's good purposes is that we should be persons who are interested in developing character through making the right choices in life. You must decide that your body is worth developing. You must be willing to exercise your body so that your physical development keeps up with your spiritual development. Your body is the "temple of God" and it is worth spending some time keeping it healthy and strong. When you realize this, then you must realize that you are indeed priceless, not only in the sight of you and your parents, but also in the sight of God."

It was indeed evident that we were in God's country as we worshipped in our Chapel on the shore overlooking His works — the mountains, the still waters of the lake, and the blue of His sky, as we listened to God's words as presented by Rev. McCleave.

A free swim before taps provided the campers a welcomed relief from the heat of the day, thus closing another activity-filled week at Camp and starting another week off "clean".
