GREYS MAINTAIN LEAD

Suspense mounts at the weekly campfires as team members listen to point totals reported by scorekeeper B.A. Altmaier. Every achievement made by a camper earns points for his team. With the season half over, many more levels must still be passed and points totaled by both teams.

At the end of the third week, the Grey team was ahead with a total of 5525 points to the Maroons' 4959. The Grey team not only held its lead at the end of the fourth week, it had increased the distance between the two scores, and now held 7990 points to the Maroon score of 6779.

For the last two years, the winning team at the close of camp has been the one which trailed behind all summer. Perhaps this is the strategy being planned by Frank Finetto's Maroon team this season?

A RAINY SATURDAY IN SPACE

-by Rex Lynne-

On a rainy Saturday, July 24, 11 boys and 3 counselors headed out to space--well, actually, over to Andover, Maine, to see a space station.

The station is the Andover Earth Station, and is the primary link for 11 overseas communications of the United States run by COMSAT (Communications Satellite Corporation). This station was built in the 1960's as part of the Early Bird, Telstar, Relay, Echo, and Syncom satellite programs.

The major feature of the Earth Station is the huge rubber radome which looks like a huge bubble. Inside is a huge horn antenna which rotates on a concrete track. This antenna is now out of date, and smaller, more sophisticated antennas presently perform most of the station's work.

At the Visitor's Center, we looked at models of the horn antenna, learned about its functions, and saw a slide presentation on the history of communications satellites. Next we viewed the huge radome and horn antenna. Outside, we could see the newer dish antennas and the control building. It was an interesting way to spend a rainy day "in space".

Those making the trip were Rex Lynne, Bill Miller, Paul Summers, Scott Cramer, Duncan Parrish, Whitney Durrell, Geoff Arthur, Pedro Borrás, Eric Jensen, Bill Heer, Peter Cano, Bill Albershardt, Keith Erf, John Bell, and Tom Taylor.

-by Tom Taylor-

The 28th Kawanee Dual Expedition to Monhegan Island got under way at 5 a.m. July 12 as sleepy campers tumbled out of bed to drag their duffel bags to the waiting truck. After a light breakfast, we hit the road, off on a three-day trip that would give us the distinction of being the only people ever allowed to "tent" on Monhegan Island. This rare privilege has been earned for us by the unswerving efforts of Goodwill Ambassador Clarence "Bates" Bate-man, whose grand personality and generous handouts of buckeyes, fidget stones, bird houses, and tall tales have made him the most popular Kawaneean ever to head out of camp with a group of boys.

By 9 a.m. we had arrived in Boothbay Harbor with plenty of time to get loaded and settled onto our trusty Balmy Days which would transport us over the 16 miles of ocean to the ISLAND. It turned out to be one of those "roll-y" days--not exceptionally rough, but the swells were just so well spaced and came at just the right angle, that maximum discomfort was experienced by a goodly number of the seafarers--including the "hardy captain" of the K.Y.C., who is "never, never sick at sea. What, never? No, never! What never? Well, hardly ever!"

We reached Monhegan at just the right time, and tumbled ashore in the midst of the activity of a Maine lobstering-tourist-artists colony village. The Rockcrest shop was so well decorated with hundreds of brightly painted buoys, that Mark Nachman contemplated becoming a lobster so he could be caught by one. Kurt Morgan and Trip Randall scampered down the rocks to test how slippery the seaweed was. They had no trouble maneuvering around the slimy stuff, but later on, Trip lived up to his name and slipped off the wharf for an unexpected swim.

We unloaded our duffels from the boat and loaded them onto the truck which would take them up to our campsite, and headed off for a picnic lunch at the shipwreck of the sea-going tug boat D.T. Sheridan which wrecked on Monhegan with no loss of life in 1948. Nearby was also the wreck of the wooden yawl Cresta which wrecked at the same spot in 1957. During the Revolutionary War, a British warship was wrecked also on this legendary island--only part of the lore of Monhegan.

After Greg Mueller and Scott Cramer had devoured the last remaining sandwiches and Jack Lang had squeezed the last orange, we trekked up the long hill to the Lighthouse and our campsite. We set up the tents and prepared our home quarters. Everyone seemed to need cooling off, so we got into bathing suits and headed down to Swim Beach. On this hot, sweltering summer day, we dashed down and jumped in for a refreshing plunge, only to discover that the waters of the North Atlantic are cooler than the waters of Lake Webb: everyone jumped back out onto the beach almost as quickly as he had jumped in the water. Chris Reilly, Dave Gingrich, Scott Cress, Scott Cramer, and Michael Lash decided to swim out to a mooring buoy to test their endurance. They made the trip without difficulty (under a counselor's watchful eye) but later in the day they learned about an eight foot shark which had been washed up on the beach!

After the swim we had supper at the Trailing Yew--delicious halibut fillets and lamb. The meals on the Island this year were particularly good, appreciated the wit as well as the efficiency of the waitresses. Steve Seemann decided that he would like to take one of the girls home with him. One of the girls asked about the good-looking lad with the Maine accent. Mark Nachman, Jeff Luce, she asked "Loose from what?"

The evening was filled with horseshoe games, kite flying, San Juan.

Back to the Island Again

eating candy, and all sorts of good things which make Monhegan special. Unhappily, a cold, damp fog flowed in around us from the sea, and we headed for our campsite early. We sang a few songs, then hit the sack.

During the night, a tremendously heavy rain poured down upon our encampment, giving some boys their first baths and others a chance to practice Basic Water Safety skills. By daylight, Paul Summers and Peter Carnahan were sighted paddling their bedrolls. (Paul had not adjusted the tent flap properly; all the water that rolled down the tent roiled right inside it.)

Breakfast on Monhegan was served early (Oh, how extra early it seemed!). Soon after the sun had risen above the rolling ocean. After Miguel Margarida defeated Bruce Field for the morning horseshoe championship (or was it vice versa?), we split into two groups. One left to board Capt. Sherman Stanley's boat for deep-sea fishing while the other prepared to sail over to Manana Island.

The fishing went really well; Peter Carnahan landed one of the largest fish of the week—a 48-pound cod. Scott Cress was close behind with a 43-pounder (somewhat larger than the guppies he raises at home). In the meantime, the Manana group was enjoying its hike over the crests of the high, steep island. We all missed the presence of the famous hermit, Ray Phillips, who lived on the island for over 40 years and always had a special welcome for the Kawanhee boys.

However, a special treat was in store. Steve Whitney, a friend of Kawanhee from Weld, is one of the Coast Guardsmen stationed on Manana, and he graciously opened the station to us. We toured all the facilities, and later in the day, the Lighthouse itself, something we had never done before.

When we left the station, we climbed along a ledge to see the famous Manana inscriptions. These rock carvings have been studied since 1853. For many years they have been believed to be the work of Viking explorers. However, this past spring, experts from a New England organization which studies ancient languages discovered that the inscriptions are in an ancient Iberian script used by the Phoenicians in about 2500 B.C. This discovery was a profound shock to historians, and may cause the re-writing of current history books concerning early European discovery of America. Other records indicate that Eric the Red, the famous Viking, visited Monhegan about 960 A.D. Stories about the "Bottomless Pit" lend an air of mystery to Manana Island, also.

Both groups met on Monhegan for lunch at the lighthouse. During our tour of the lighthouse (the second highest on the American coast), we learned that the present one dates from 1850. Until 15 years ago, the light was fueled by kerosene. Now, twin iodine quartz lamps light the way.

After lunch, the two groups switched positions; the morning Manana explorers boarded the fishing boat, while the fishermen went to the island. The afternoon fishing group was led by Dave Boothby, who caught a cod that tipped the scales at nearly 50 pounds.

The third morning dawned, and the packs were bundled up in preparation for the homeward journey. The voyagers tied on their hiking boots for a tour of the eastern cliffs, which drop about 150 feet into the ocean. The views were spectacular; some of the boys could almost envision Europe across the eastern horizon.

By noon, we were on the Balmie Days and headed back to Boothbay Harbor for a special treat. We arrived just in time to eat lunch and watch the "Wind-jammer Days" parade. Then we watched the parade of schooners coming into the harbor. Nearly all of the large coasting vessels came gliding into port, including the Victory Chimes, the largest passenger vessel under sail in the United States, and the only three-masted schooner on the Atlantic coast.

Soon we piled into Bouncing Buggy and B.A.'s car for the homeward trip. We were tired, but excited about the trip and full of wonderful fish stories from the mysterious island in the north Atlantic.

The first group of Monhegan trippers included Peter Carnahan, Rex Lynne, Steve Sengelmann, Manuel San Juan, Will Warren, Jeff Luce, Chris Reilly, John Bertran, Dave Gingrich, Jack Lang, Miguel Margarida, Mark Nachman, David Boothby, Scott Cress, Paul Summers, Kurt Morgan, Trip Randall, Greg Mueller, John Hall, Scott Cramer, Michael Lash, Bruce Field, Chummy Sullivan, Pedro Borrás, and Rick Spencer. Leaders were Bates, Tom Taylor, Bob Altmaier, Mark Sengelmann, and Steve Yale.

WHITE WATER! Jeff Morgan and John Hamblin shoot the rapids on the Androscoggin River.

CANOEING ON THE ANDROSCOGGIN

—by John Marbach

The second overnight canoe trip of the season got off on July 22; when camp truck and canoe trailer were loaded, the crew of 19 left camp about 10 a.m. We stopped at Screw Auger Falls in Grafton Notch State Park for lunch. All foodstuffs were in order; lunch consisted of peanut butter and jelly sandwiches, Snickers bars and "bug" juice. The group continued on to Errol, New Hampshire, where we could see kayak gates on a practice section of the Androscoggin River. The Kawanhee contingent set up camp about three miles farther down, and unloaded canoes and equipment. Then we set off for four miles of good paddling. There were some good white water rapids and some calm sections in about a four mile per hour current. The canoes all made it safely back to pickup spot; most boys reported some water in their canoes and some rocks were hit.

At the pickup spot, there is a bridge about fifteen feet high; everyone jumped off into a fifty yard stretch of rapids, where they enjoyed being bounced around in the white water haystacks.

We reloaded the canoes and took another run in the same stretch of the river, did a little swimming, and then headed back to the campsite.

In no time, a hot fire was roaring and we all enjoyed hamburgers a la Jeff Morgan. After supper, boys swam in the river or took canoes into a small stream on the other side of the river, into a swamp. The sun set after a beautiful sunny day, and later everyone joined around the campfire for a round of what turned out to be bad jokes. Soon everyone rolled out sleeping bags on the grass for a good night's rest under a fantastic array of stars.

Early at 4:30, the sun woke John Marbach and Mitch, who began to build a fire for warmth. Later, a rather early breakfast consisted of bacon a la John Marbach and scrambled eggs with ham a la Chris Yardley. Another run down the river, then it was time to clean up the campsite and head back for the shores of Lake Webb. Lunch was eaten in Grafton Notch again, and we arrived safely back in Kawanhee at 3 p.m.

KAWANHEE THEATRE OPENS WITH DOUBLE BILL

Under the capable direction of Tim Williams, the Kawanhee players repertory company presented the season's first plays. The first offering, The Shiny Red Ball by Cleve Humboldt, featured Rees Tulloss and John White. The play, which admittedly puzzled even the director, centered around the sale of a shiny red ball, with the wheeling-dealing style of used car dealers. Rees and John are veteran Kawanhee players, and performed in their customary fine style.

Four new actors appeared in the audience's favorite, If Men Played Cards As Women Do, by George S. Kaufman. This delightful satire on ladies' bridge luncheons and attendant gossip was entertainingly handled by John Frey, Will Warren, Leigh Oliva, and Tom Watkins. Kawanhee audiences will look forward to more productions featuring these six talented young actors.

Backstage details were handled with flair by Chip Trayner, Chris Reilly, Albert Natelli, and Richard Popp, with assistance from staff members Mark Standen, Bill Yardley, John Detrick, and K.C. Morrin.

KAWANHEE LITTLE LEAGUE REPORT

-by Nick Gill-

BLACK BUBBLE BURSTS: GREEN MONSTER MOVES INTO FIRST PLACE TIE

In the heaviest week of action on Button Park this season, the Black Magic win machine came to a grinding halt. Early in the week, Black Ace Erich Sengelmann stymied the Green Monster on a one-hitter, whiffing 17 Greenies. Jon Morgan, Robert Moomijy, and Brian Birch pounded Monster Lynne for a total of seven safeties. Morgan had a double and Moomijy a bases loaded clutch triple. Final Score: Magic 5, Monsters 1.

Rightly Sengelmann pitched again only three days later. This time he recorded the first no-hitter of the season, blanking the Orange Plus, 10-0. Only one man, Doug Chakmakian (Big Mac), reached as far as third. The first five Magicians in the batting order: Brian Birch, Will Fleming, John Ketterer, Erich Sengelmann, and Jon Morgan, collected at least two hits to lead the Black onslaught.

But Thursday afternoon the party was over for the Magic. A stunning upset, pulled off by Peter Belskis' Green Monster club ended the Black victory string at four. Down 4-3 with a frame to go, Brian Hekemian drew a walk off speedy Erich Sengelmann, stole second, then third, and trotted home with the tying run on Andy Trayner's second of three base hits. In the bottom of the inning, Greg Mueller singled, Birch doubled, moving Mueller to third. Jeff Marchand outwaited Green starter Rex Lynne and reached first via the walk. But with the bases loaded, the Black rally fizzled and Lynne bore down to strike out one batter, then forced another to ground out. In the top half of the 7th, Andy Trayner heroically won the game by doubling down the power alley in left center to score Peter Cano, thus shattering the Magic's dream of an undefeated 1976 campaign.

The Black Magic hosted its fourth game of the week against the cellar-dwelling Misty Blue. Lars Jensen, slated as the starting pitcher for the Misties, had to date, never started a K.L.L. game. He had to face the hardest hitting club in the league--the Magic. Youngster Jensen responded with a mighty performance, 7-hitting the Magic while fanning eleven Flip LiCalzi's 3 hits and Steve Minus's pair of doubles and a triple provided the offensive punch that sealed up a 10-5 drubbing of the once unstoppable Black Magic.

In other games: The Orange Plus maintained respectability around the league by winning one and losing two. Pilots O.J. and B.A. gave Doug Colescott the nod to start against the Misty Blue. Doug finished it twirling a one-hitter, winning it 10-4. The Plus needed only one hit themselves to furnish a ten-run output, in a game plagued by "hit-a-batsman" walks and errors.

While on the topic of one-hitters, Misty Blue Flip LiCalzi threw one against the Green Monster, yet they managed to lose the game, 9-8.

The Green Monster, in another close one, nipped the Orange Plus in the week's final game. Steve Sengelmann, brother of Erich, made an impressive showing in his debut and picked up the win. The Green mounted a 10-10 lead, but the ever-bustling Orange Plus came back with six runs in the final frame, to narrow the margin to a respectable 10-8 score. The Green win moved them into a first place tie with the Black Magic.

HANK AARON LEAGUE REPORT

-by Scott McMinn-

There have been but two games since the last H.A.L. report, both involving MacPhail's Navy, and both won by that team. July 16th, Scott MacPhail pitched his team to a narrow and harrowing 9-6 victory over the Bell System, the second consecutive defeat for the System, which lowered their record to a break-even 2-2. The Navy, which had previously gone down to the System 15-14, needed a five-run sixth inning to break a 4-4 tie and take the victory home. MacPhail himself batted across the winning run with a double. The System staged a seventh inning rally that brought back memories of their come-from-behind victory in the previous matchup, but were able to get only two of the five runs they needed to stay in the game.

On the strength of that victory, the Navy went out July 20th and destroyed the System again, this time by a healthy 27-13 margin that ensured their sole possession of the top spot in the H.A.L. circuit. The Navy collected 24 hits on the day, five for extra bases, and benefited from nine walks donated by the System hurler Dave Van Houten. The System grabbed an early 4-2 lead, but MacPhail and his crew exploded for ten runs in an almost endless second inning, and never looked back. Six Navy players blasted three or more hits, including four for MacPhail and Hank Shamamian, while Jim McDonald's home run and a perfect three-for-three day by Jose Valles were about the only bright spots for the System, which lost its third straight.

COUNSELOR LEAGUE REPORT

For a while there, you had to plead "no contest". On paper and on the field, the Senior Counselors were the team to beat. Yes, they sold Balakian, the superlative center fielder, to the Juniors, reportedly to lighten the payroll. And some claimed B.A., the pitcher that the Seniors paid so much for, was damaged merchandise and dissatisfied with his contract to boot. But there it was—the S.C.'s, in the first game of the season, scored three times as many runs as the Juniors and looked at least that much better.

But things just didn't work out that way. In game number two, B.A.'s knee gave out and Dr. O.J., his brother, was called upon to fill his shoes on the mound. The Juniors battered him and took home a 12-11 victory.

B.A. came back the next night and was able to go nine innings, and the Seniors made it look easy again, battering J.C. hurler Mark Schiewetz for 25 hits and keeping consistently ahead of their rivals, finally winning 17-11.

Then there was a week off, the all-star break, when the Kawanhee Counselor All-Stars squeaked by the Rumford Eagles 11-10. And when the Senior Counselors took the field again Saturday, July 24th, they were a team ready and expecting to pick up where they had left off, battering the J.C.'s into the ground. But Schiewetz and his squad just didn't see it that way.

Schiewetz walked only one S.C. all night, and his fastball baffled three into striking out. He allowed only seven Senior safeties, while his team supported him with twenty-four hits and twenty-one runs, and the S.C.'s barely avoided a shutout by collecting two runs in the final frame.

That tied the supposedly lopsided series at two wins for each side, and it was a much sobered Senior Counselor team that took the field the following night. The game quickly proved to be a pitcher's duel, or at least by the standards set in previous games this season, and when the Juniors came to bat in the bottom of the seventh and final inning, they were behind by a run, 5-4. But the Seniors never recorded an out that inning, allowing two hits, two errors, and a fatal two runs. Once again Schiewetz had tossed a seven hitter, and now his team led the series they were never supposed to contend, three games to two.

Conspicuous by their absence in the weekend sweep were S.C.'s Billy Proctor, Brian Birch, and Bill Albershardt, all of whom supply the hefty bats and solid defense the Seniors so sorely needed. But though the Juniors beat a weakened S.C. team, the fans saw something that most, at the beginning of the season, thought they would never see: a Junior squad not only solid and capable of winning, but one capable of beating the best team the Seniors can put on field. And next weekend, when both teams put their best ten on the field, the Seniors, down now by one game, may be hard put to prove that they are the "class" of Kawanhee softball, as they so long have claimed.

WRESTLING REPORT

The first wrestling event of the '76 season took place on Monday evening, July 19th, in Kawanhee's ideally suited wrestling arena. Some of the camp's most highly respected wrestlers were away on trip (Mt. Washington and Tumble-down claimed Chip Trayner, Will Fleming, Brian Birch, Carter Messick, and Jon Morgan) but the competitive bouts of this Maroon-Grey meet testified to the abundance of new talent and old depth in Kawanhee's wrestling ranks. The lighter weight classes offered the most closely contested bouts and a nip-and-tuck team score. Lars Jensen defeated Mike Lash by an 8-6 margin and David Colescott decisioned Chummy Sullivan 7-4 in the 75 and 80 pound weight divisions. Newcomers Whitney Durrell and Harlan Levey made excellent showings against the Sengelmann Brothers, though Erich and Steve each came away with a win. The evening's most riotous moment came during the 130 pound match when a dubious challenger from Madrid, Celio Gonzalez, upset Mike Duncan's hold on reality by collecting five incredibly fast points. The veteran Duncan finally fought his way off his back, regained his composure, and pinned his crowd-pleasing opponent late in the second period. Mack Bell realized the difficulty of following this drama with anything better; he put a quick and humble end to the evening with a first-period pin.

The Wrestling department thanks Lorenzo Baker, Mark Sengelmann, Tim Williams, and numerous fans for helping to make the tournament a success. The final tournament, open to everyone, will be getting underway in the very near future.

Exciting races in the Grey-Maroon Summer Series Regatta

MAROONS SUMMER SERIES SAILS SWELL SUPREME

The Kawanhee Yacht Club Summer Series Regatta is now one-half over, and the Race Committee of the K.Y.C. wants to bring its readers up to date on action thus far in the Raft Department.

The First Summer Series Regatta was held on July 11, 1976. Sailing for the Greys were skippers Lou San Juan and Peter Seeley. Their crews were Pedro Borrás and Leigh Oliva. The Maroon team consisted of skippers Wynn Parrish and William Warren and crews Dave Colescott and Scott Cramer. The first races were close but uneventful. In the third race, some protests occurred resulting in the disqualifying of both Maroon skippers. By the end of the fourth Race, the final results were: first place Lou San Juan with 17 points; William Warren second with 14; Wynn Parrish third with 12 points; and Peter Seeley also third with 12. The score resulted in the Maroons: 26 the Greys: 29.

The Second Regatta of the Summer Series occurred partly on Saturday, July 17, and partly on Tuesday, July 20th. After the first Race, on Saturday, a large storm appearing through the Gap caused postponement of the remainder of the Regatta. The last three races were sailed after supper in a moderate calm on Tuesday. Jack Lang and John Ketterer skippered for the Maroons, and Albert Natelli and Peter Carnahan sailed for the Greys. Rick Spencer, Duncan Parrish, Doug Chakmakian, and Dave Colescott served as Maroon crews; and Chip Trayner, Erich Sengelmann, Scott Cramer, and Doug Colescott crewed for the Greys. Again, it was the third Race which saw most of the protest action, although the fourth Race also added some thrills. As the summer progresses, the boys become sharper on their racing rules, and some interesting incidents occur. Although Jack Lang had two firsts, he was DSQ'ed out of the last two races in which he had gotten a second and a third, Peter Carnahan also suffered a DSQ from a third place. The Second Summer Series Regatta ended with John Ketterer first with 17 points; Albert Natelli second with 14; Jack Lang, third with 12; and Peter Carnahan, fourth with 10 points. The Maroons won this Regatta with 29 points to the Greys' 24.

The Third Summer Series Regatta took place on a windy Saturday afternoon on July 24th. Eric Jensen and Mack Bell skippered for the Maroons with Whitney Durrell and Peter Epstein crewing. Mike Dehlendorf and Rick Dieterick crewed for Grey skippers Sam Detrick and Pedro Borrás. The magic race was again the third race in which Mack Bell protested Sam Detrick on a leeward over windward situation. Sam was clearly in the wrong and dropped out of the race to preserve his one starting point. The Third Regatta was concluded with the Maroons winning handily, 39 to 20 points. In the three regattas to date, the Maroons have amassed a total of 94 points to the Greys' 73. It is still only half-way to the end of the Regatta Series, but the Grey skippers will have to sharpen up their skills to catch the sailing Maroons. (scores inside)
