Maroons in a Rut — Just Keep on Winning!

It is coming to be an old, old story when Fergie reads the weekly scores, but one which rings with unflinching sweetness in the ears of the Maroons. Clay Davenport and his boys once again found themselves leading by an increased margin in the announcement at the campfire of Saturday, August 3. On that date, the total score read: Maroons, 8520; Greys, 6995. The Maroon lead had been built up to 1525, for in the course of the preceding week that team had added 370 points to the advantage of 1155 which it boasted on July 27.

The points won between July 28 and August 3 were divided: Maroons, 2605; Greys, 2235. Swimming levels made their weight felt for the first time, accounting for more than a third of the week's total of 4840 points. The Maroons had completed thirty Swimming levels for 965 points, and the Greys twenty-four for 730. This report actually represented the pay-off on four weeks of steady work in this department, rather than one week of convulsive activity. The Swimming program is so organized that primary attention is given to the passing of, and classification according to, Red Cross swimming tests. A considerable stage of progress must be attained before it is possible to translate individual accomplishments into terms of Achievement Levels. That point having been reached, the contributions of Swimming are likely to loom large in scores to come.

Another anomaly in the week's tally was the fact that no points were recorded for the two Maroon-Grey sports events of the week, the basketball game of July 28 won by the Greys, and the water meet of August 3 which was captured by the Maroons. The scoring of such points is at present in abeyance, due to general dissatisfaction with the practice, initiated this year, of awarding a predetermined block of points for each such team victory, regardless of the actual scores of the events themselves. As soon as a new policy is formulated, the results of this game and this water meet will be added into the score, at the same time that retroactive revisions are made of the points dealt out for earlier Maroon-Grey athletic contests.

Outpost Camp Featured on Trip Program

The Trip program for the week was a varied one, with the major emphasis on the Swift River Outpost Camp which once more was in operation under the expert supervision of Herb Birch. Junior A's and Seniors who had elected this expedition on their mid-July trip questionnaires occupied the camp from Tuesday, July 30, to Thursday evening, and the Eagles, Falcons and Panthers, with Bill Dutcher and Fred Appleton, moved in for a memorable one-night visit on Friday. The Junior Maine Guide party was at Bemis from Wednesday to Saturday. The three youngest lodges enjoyed a specialized Nature trip with Miss Baker on Thursday. Friday, a small group of Junior Counselors and Master Campers climbed Mt. Spec, one of Maine's highest and most rugged mountains, with Del Tracy. The final sortie of the week was the Hawks' overnight sailing trip to Bowley Beach with Mike Smith and Ernie Johanson on Friday.

Swift River Party Learns Logging Lingo

After a delay of one and a half days, due to the weepy condition of the skies, the cry of "All aboard" was sounded and the first of the Swift River trips was on its way Tuesday afternoon, July 30. The entourage was composed of seventeen Beavers, Moose, Wildcats and Badgers of assorted sizes and temperaments; charge d'affaires Herb Birch; his aide-de-camp, Del Tracy; and Bates, in whose hands we placed our safety for the ride to the Outpost Camp.

At first it was noticed that something on this trip was different. There were no parachutes or oxygen masks provided for the descent from the altitudes attained on the various bumps. We learned that a new technique had been developed for removing the bumps from the trip—chuck holes in the "road" had been filled.

Soon we found that a side trip had been arranged for the group by the Messrs. Birch and Bateman. In the area through which we were to pass logging operations on a large scale were under way. It was not long before we were being introduced to the jargon of the industry. The term "twitching", which is commonly associated with an involuntary action which follows the landing of a pestiferous insect on the exposed surface of the tender sections of the human anatomy, is used by the loggers to convey the idea of a large, well conditioned member of the equine species pulling an enormous log from deep within the woods out to a space where a man with a twentieth century cross-cut saw (a mechanized chain saw) cuts it into four-foot lengths. Following this operation sledges pulled by two powerful horses drag the loaded sleds out the logging road to the main road where the logs are loaded onto the lumber trucks. This routine, to us experienced loggers, is known as "yarding".

"All aboard" was soon sounded and we were off to Swift River with no more scheduled stops. We arrived at the Outpost Camp and immediately started setting up tents, as we were accustomed to the fickleness of the Maine weather. Even before tents were pitched the campers were begging to be fed. It might be said in passing that never in history have so few eaten so much. Food preparation was once again in the very capable hands of Uncle Charlie Long. Due to the lateness of the arrival and the time spent in consuming the meal, bed time was soon forthcoming, after a relaxing cup of hot chocolate had been prepared by Herb Birch.

Wednesday the group hiked to Byron and Coos Canyon for a noonday meal and swim at the canyon. At Coos, the campers had an enjoyable swim followed by a tasty lunch served in the traditional Swift River manner. Then followed the usual period of relaxation. The swim up the river to the falls was abandoned due to the threats of fluidness detected in the sky. Later we were saddened to see the sun shine brightly but, by way of compensation, we had the opportunity of playing around the falls for a considerable period of time.

"Back to camp" was the command — excuse me — the request! The topic of conversation on the trek to the Outpost was the unconfirmed rumor that we were having hamburgers for the evening meal. Arriving in camp, the rumor proved to be correct. Hamburgers and French fries were indeed a treat enjoyed by everyone. Bed (?) that night was a welcomed experience, for the morrow would bring a search for gold on Swift River.

The next morning, after an arduous hike, we arrived at the scene of our mining operations. The activity was divided into two parts: in the morning all were to co-operate on the sluicing operations, in which all were to share equally (That is, those who worked!); and in the afternoon "panning" was the order of the day. Here each worker was allowed to keep all of the loot which he was able to separate from Mother Nature. A final analysis and evaluation, made after the day's work, indicated that all of us would still have to work for our livelihood.

After a swim at Little Coos, it was back to the Outpost for our last meal, and then back to Kawanhee with no millions in gold, but with many experiences that will warm the cockles of our hearts for many years to come.

J. M. G. Hopefuls Hoe Tough Row at Bemis

On Wednesday, July 31, twelve of Kawanhee's "best in campcraft" left for an adventure which was actually to change their way of thinking in "the art of living out of doors". They set out in the camp truck, canoe trailer bobbing behind, for the testing grounds of the Junior Maine Guide program at Bemis, Maine, there to embark as candidates upon three days of tests and examinations. Whether the boys "passed" or not is insignificant, in this writer's estimation, because the knowledge and experience which they gained from their trip will be with them wherever they go.

The boys camped under some of the most adverse conditions possible in the state of Maine, for they were camping in virgin wilderness. The senior guides told the candidates that they had followed the bulldozer as it cut the road to the campsite. To make the situation even more of a challenge, the elements opened up and the boys showed their true drive when they were determined enough to take off their clothes and pitch their tents in their bathing suits. A short time later the rain stopped. Warm sun and roaring fires dried out the wet clothes, and no illnesses were reported during the trip or as a result of the trip.

As is the case every year, the boys were tested by six Camp guides who are regular staff members of the Junior Maine Guide program. The boys were submitted to what may well be the most thorough test of cumulative campcraft skills ever developed.

Dawn of Thursday brought welcome sunshine and the testing went into high gear. This year there were ninety-one male candidates from various Maine camps, setting an all-time record for total numbers. (The feminine candidates, who surprisingly have a greater passing percentage, were to take over the testing grounds the following week.) Mike Mathews and Art Downey, who were assisting in the testing this year, both commented that J. M. G. was an entirely different system from the testers' point of view than that which they observed as candidates in 1955 and 1956. Both agreed that they had never seen a smoother-running operation under such adverse conditions.

After covering canoeing, compass work, and axmanship in the second day, the boys were ready to enter into the most difficult portion of the examinations, the written tests and the ordeal of building wet-day fires. Likely to become a classic in Kawanhee history is the wet-day fire presented by Bill "Chips" Chipman, for it beat the clock to the twenty-minute time limit by just nineteen seconds! Due to a great quantity of practice in Kawanhee prior to the tests, ten of the boys passed their fire tests with flying colors.

On the last morning, one Kawanhee unit was caught off guard with wet biscuit dough and raw oatmeal but, outside of this unfortunate event, the cooking tests went remarkably well.

The results of the Junior Maine Guide tests will not be made public before mid-August, due to the necessary processing and individual discussion which each boy's examination must receive. For the present, Kawanhee can only say "Good luck" and "Good job" to the twelve candidates who constituted the largest delegation which this camp has ever sent to the J. M. G. tests.

Juniors Journey to Wildlife Den

On Thursday, August 1, the Eagles, Falcons and Panthers, twenty-four strong, went on their first all-day trip out of camp. With Bates to handle the Bouncing Buggy, and Bill Dutcher to keep the boys in line, Mary Baker had a fine time as general factotum.

Just beyond Rumford Center, Bates sighted an eagle soaring high in the sky. As he pulled off the road for us to get a better view, the truck slid down into the soft, deep sand. Bates had to work a little to get it up on the road but, when a man offered to get his horse to pull it out, the old buggy just zoomed right out of there.

At Paris Hill, we took a turn to the right, out to the old Slatery quarry where the boys found plenty of muscovite and biotite mica, graphic granite, cinnamon garnet and rose quartz. Several large pieces were brought home for display in the Nature Building.

We made a brief stop at Perham's and then hustled over to the picnic grounds of the Maine Wildlife Den at Bryant's Pond. The delicious sandwiches which Mr. Dexter had so kindly helped to prepare were topped off with cookies and a bottle of pop apiece.

To make the handling of our group easier for the zoo owner, it was divided into two parts. While one group looked at the animals, the second group had fun on the playground. The owner carries with him a box of raisins which all the animals seem to eat with relish. Each one is fed in turn and sometimes can be coaxed to show off a little. The bear cubs whined for the raisins, then said "Yum, yum, yum" as they ate. The baby ground hog patti-caked for us and did a comic side-step walk. Even the snakes enjoyed our attention. Much to our surprise, the little green grass snake felt silky, just like nylon cord. We petted several of the baby animals and were allowed to hold some of the turtles.

When everyone had completed the zoo tour, we all clambered into the truck again ready to take off. The end of our pleasant trip was our safe arrival back in camp about 4:00 P.M., with all hands present and accounted for, thanks to Bill Dutcher and Bates.

Counselor Returns: Water Skiing Initiated

The week was enlivened by the return on Monday of Herb Yenser, the popular and successful Music Counselor of the past three seasons. Herb is head of the Music Department at Upper Arlington High School at his home in Columbus. He spent the early part of the summer in Ohio and came to Kawanhee from Delaware Water Gap, Pennsylvania, where he had gone with a large group of his Arlington students for Fred Waring's third Youth Music Workshop and where, in past summers, he has himself put in considerable study at the Advanced Choral Workshop. Herb lost no time in reorganizing his large, enthusiastic and much admired Kawanhee Glee Club, of which fact the sounds of rehearsal emanating from the Rec Hall soon gave notice.

The introduction of a new activity, water-skiing, further distinguished the week. In the past a few counselors have displayed their skim-and-splash prowess whenever a visiting boat from uplake would provide the motive power, but water-skiing could not be organized as a camp sport until the recent addition to the Kawanhee flotilla of a 15-foot, mahogany-hulled Larson speed boat with a 35-horsepower Johnson outboard motor. The activity is under the supervision of Jack Welton and the Swimming Department, with Herb Yenser and Gardner Defoe to operate the boat. A Red Cross Life Saver rides the boat at all times, and would-be skiers must all be lake swimmers and must wear life vests. During various designated periods Friday, Saturday and Sunday, enthusiasts and experimenters lined the little dock, awaiting their turns on the water skis, and many a graceful wake was plowed across the waters of the cove, with occasional splashes suggesting that not all Kawanhee skiers found the sport as simple as it looks when Gardner goes swooping around the lake.

Wildcats and Termites Split

On Tuesday, July 30, the Wildcats met the Termites in what turned out to be one of the best pitchers' duels of the Little League season. George Tittmann of the Termites threw a no-hit, no-run game at the Wildcats, while rival pitcher Ed Spelyng yielded only one hit. The Termites tallied one run off Spelyng, which turned out to be the margin. It resulted from a streak of wildness in the fourth, when he gave out four free bases. Ross Shepard had the game's only hit, a single in the third.

The Wildcats had another chance on Thursday, August 1, against the Hornets. Ed Spelyng hurled again and this time no one managed to get any hits off him. He struck out twelve men and walked only three. The final score was 5-0 in favor of the Wildcats. Pepper Sweet was the losing pitcher for the Hornets. He gave up two hits in the first inning, but the Wildcats were unable to push any runs across the plate. The lead-off batter, Bruce Gardner, singled, but was caught trying to steal. John Glidden then banged out a triple, but was left stranded on third base. After going down one-two-three in the second, the Wildcats opened up and scored five runs on four hits in the third. John Glidden hit his second triple of the day. This blast, along with three singles and three walks, was responsible for the big inning. After this the Wildcats offered no more serious scoring threats, but those five runs were plenty in view of the shutout which Spelyng heaved at the Hornets.

Cougars Rack up No. 6

The Cougars went after their sixth win of the season on Friday, August 2, in a tremendous battle with the Termites, and took it 9 to 8. They tallied one in the first on two walks given up by Termite pitcher Charley Sarich, and two errors. But the Termites retaliated with three in their half on one hit and three errors. The Cougars were shutout in the second and the Termites picked up three more from five errors, a walk, and a double by Robin Wells. Tom Tibbals came in to relieve Sarich in the third when the Cougars fought back and brought in four runs. A single, three walks, and a bases-loaded triple did the damage. The Termites couldn't score in the third and the Cougars pushed over four more runs in the fourth. A one-bagger, another bases-loaded triple, and four walks produced the winning runs. The Termites needed three runs to tie and four to win. Two, however, were all they could produce and the Cougars successfully protected their unbeaten string.

Four postponed games in the Little League schedule have not yet been made up. The standings, as of August 3, were as follows:

COUGARS		Won, 6		Lost, 0		Pct., 1.000
WILDCATS		Won, 2		Lost, 3		Pct., .400
TERMITES		Won, 3		Lost, 5		Pct., .375
HORNETS		Won, 1		Lost, 4		Pct., .200

Maroons Swamp Greys in Water Meet

Saturday, August 3, saw another water meet contested by the Maroons and the Greys. The outcome was an overwhelming victory for the Maroons, 85 to 38. Only in the first event did the Greys hold their own against the Maroons. That event was a canoeing and swimming relay. As the result of a misunderstanding of the objective of the final swimming lap, it ended in a declared tie giving 5 points to each team. From that point on the Maroons maintained the lead, and were never threatened again.

A most amusing race was the Junior B Tub Race, won by D. Bittenbender of the Maroons over T. Pears of the Greys. Each boy sat in an old wooden tub and paddled from one dock to the other, a distance of thirty-five yards.

Bittenbender won by almost two lengths—or diameters! The most exciting event was the Junior B Freestyle Relay, won by the Grey team. The Maroons led until the last lap when Tim Hirsch came through and won by one length. The War Canoe race was won by the Maroons with little or no trouble, due to the absence of most of the regular Grey canoe team. The meet was well attended by a large group of visiting parents.

Resurgent Glee Club Shines Sunday Night

The campfire of Saturday evening, August 4, in the Council Ring began conventionally with the ceremony of the Winds and a few songs, but wound up in a somewhat unorthodox fashion when the time usually devoted to the weekly story was appropriated for a most interesting and amusing verbal report on the Junior Maine Guide encampment by Art Downey. The Sunday morning service was also out of doors, with Dean Miller preaching on "Growing Up" in the Chapel on the Shore.

Sunday evening marked the summer's debut of the full Glee Club, some fifty strong, under the animating direction of the Old Maestro, Herb Yenser himself. The program was a generous one, and was most enthusiastically received by an audience which strained the capacity of the Recreation Hall. The Glee Club sang eight numbers, beginning with a group so varied as to include Happy Wanderer; We'll Go a Long, Long Way Together; Rocking My Soul; and Jesus Walked. Tim Smith was the evening's piano soloist, performing—if one were to believe both the music and Yenser's introduction of it—a concerto by Johann Sebastian Belafonte. Featured spots on the program were reserved for Bill Chipman's sax, Julian Freedman's trumpet, and Jim Parker's accordion, and all of them were handsomely filled to the loudly expressed satisfaction of the large fan clubs already inspired by these gentlemen. Jim's excerpts from the Rhapsody in Blue, and the Haydn number for trumpet played by Freedman hit something of a high for good music in these parts, while the duet by Chipman and Parker definitely had things rocking. The Glee Club was at the top of its notable form in its two concluding numbers, an arrangement of Onward Christian Soldiers and the Malotte setting of The Lord's Prayer.
