Careful Inspection Proves Moose To Be Kawanhee's Neatest

Kawanhee's own Inspector, Mr. Bryant, has been on the job this summer. Each morning at nine o'clock he has made his rounds, seeing that all beds were made, all floors swept and all the lodges spick and span for the day. Every afternoon he has paid an unannounced visit to the lodges, with an floor and wet bathing suits, which not to win inspection. E. As usual, the Inspector has performed a thankless task faithfully

When asked for a statement, Mr. Bryant expressed himself as being well satisfied with the inspections this summer. The lodges, he felt, have been quite good on the whole. The campers have been considerably more lengthy if out in them. Bass Rock is across the Frank had not strictly rationed his lake. #### PUNK FROM THE LOG

Most of the week, the weather was perfectly normal. It rained. It rained a week on Tuesday and ten days more on Wednesday. Allgyer was wondering if he could possibly run off his tennis tournaments by using water wings. The Eagles set to work, desperately building dams on the shore in the faint hope of keeping the camp from washing away, thus leaving Barth and Burger free to go on reading the adventures of the Rover Boys to each other. Frank Harrah heated things up a bit with his hot piano Thursday night, and the whole damp camp just sat and steamed with appreciation. Obviously, the forty days and the forty nights would soon be accomplished, so the last minute preparations for the sailing of the ark were rushed through. Fortunately, the Ark itself was ready, due to the summer long efforts of Terry and Ken and the other Falcons. All they had to do was to install one more double-decker bunk to take care of Bob Ward and the snakes which Pixley and the other snake-charmers were so busily rounding up.

Then the unbelievable happened! The sun came out Saturday afternoon. Now, everything is looking up. Allgyer has been out, sounding for his tennis courts, and Coach Smith thinks that the lake will be dry enough for water sports some time before Thanksgiving.
